International exhibition of young Italian architects

Shanghai - Pudong

PADIGLIONE ITALIANO Expo Park, Zone C

3 Settembre 2010

This exhibition has the aim to achieve a project for the diffusion of the architecture.

VENTISETTENTASETTE. Rassegna internazionale di giovani architetti italiani, among others objectives, has the aim to promote the work of young Italian architects abroad, allowing cultural exchange and internships both in Europe and in the world.

This show will bring Rome to Cina, starting from important event of Universal Exposition of Shanghai 2010.

High Technology and Italian Design will be linked to the high specificity and the quality that have always characterized our Nation. The exhibition will focus on the know-how of our architecture, highly qualified, and it will constitute a prestigious international showcase and a unique opportunity for young architects.

The show is a kaleidoscope on the young Italian architecture: a sequence of stories, experiences, ideals of a generation of architects willing to focus their work abroad, looking for new incentives and planning challenges, because they are unable to find possibilities and real professional opportunities in Italy.

The show is a series of planning experiences (already realized or not yet realized) about competitions, design project, urban planning and the master plan; it does not want to be exhaustive: it wants, instead, to open a small "window", a small glimmer on the work of some young skilled Italian architects.

Through this variety of projects, which are very different from each other, but still similar in particular ideological trends and streams, we tried to represent a wide range of professional approaches.

We intend to show that an interior design project as well as a masterplan can contribute to make a better city and, consequently, a better life according to the slogan of Shanghai expo.
